STRATEGIC COMPLIANCE GUIDE

The Tranche 2 Playbook for Real Estate Agencies

A practical blueprint to navigate Australia's new AML/CTF obligations without holding up listings or frustrating buyers and vendors.

Prepared by Lead AML | www.leadaml.com.au

Executive Summary

The regulatory framework for the Australian property market is fundamentally changing. Starting 1 July 2026, the Tranche 2 reforms will legally compel real estate agents to adhere to the Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing (AML/CTF) Act.

Real estate professionals are viewed globally as major "gatekeepers." Because your agency facilitates the transfer of high-value assets and frequently handles significant funds via trust accounts, it presents an attractive target for illicit actors seeking to cleanse their wealth through the property market.

The "Bricks and Mortar" Vulnerability

Real estate is a globally recognized vehicle for money laundering. Criminals use complex corporate structures, third-party buyers, and cash-heavy transactions to buy property and integrate illicit funds into the legitimate economy. Tranche 2 ensures real estate agents actively identify the true buyers/sellers and report suspicious activity.

The Impact on Your Agency

Preparing for July 2026 means overhauling your vendor onboarding and buyer management workflows. Failing to meet these obligations carries severe risks:

Civil Penalties

AUSTRAC aggressively pursues non-compliance. Failing to verify a client or report suspicious behaviour can result in multi-million dollar civil penalties for your agency.

Reputational Damage

Enforcement actions are public. An AML breach instantly compromises an agency's integrity, risking the loss of community trust, high-end listings, and trusted referral networks.

SCOPE OF REGULATION

Are Your Services Captured?

Not all real estate activities are subject to AML laws. You are only regulated if your agency provides specific "Designated Services".

The Designated Service for Real Estate

Brokering the Sale, Purchase or Transfer of Real Estate

Under Item 1, Table 5 of the AML/CTF Act, you are captured when acting as an intermediary between buyers and sellers to complete property transactions. This includes:

- Listing property for sale (residential, commercial, or agricultural).
- Finding and negotiating with prospective buyers.
- Acting as a Buyer's Agent to source and secure property.
- Handling deposit funds through a real estate trust account.

What is EXCLUDED?

It is highly important to note that several common agency activities are NOT captured by the new Tranche 2 laws:

- Residential property management and tenancy agreements.
- Leasing of commercial real estate.
- Pure auctioneer services (unless the auctioneer is also acting as the seller's primary brokering agent).

Note: If you perform both excluded services (property management) and captured services (sales), your AML/CTF program only applies to the sales side of your business.

THE FRAMEWORK

The 5 Pillars of Your AML Program

AUSTRAC mandates that your agency develop and maintain a documented, risk-based AML/CTF Program tailored to your local property market.

1. ML/TF Risk Assessment

You must formally document the Money Laundering and Terrorism Financing risks your agency faces. This is based on typical property values in your area, client profiles (e.g., local families vs. foreign investors), and delivery channels.

2. Customer Due Diligence (KYC/VOI)

Verification is paramount. You must identify both vendors and buyers using primary documents (Verification of Identity). If a property is being purchased by a company or trust, you must identify the human Ultimate Beneficial Owners (UBOs).

3. Mandatory Reporting

Agents must submit Suspicious Matter Reports (SMRs) to AUSTRAC if they suspect a buyer's funds or a vendor's motives are linked to illicit activity. You must also report physical cash transactions of $10,000 or more (TTRs).

4. Personnel & Training

Your agency must appoint a dedicated AML/CTF Compliance Officer (AMLCO). All sales agents, buyer's agents, and trust account administrators must undergo AML risk awareness training to spot real estate red flags.

5. Strict Record Keeping

Every ID collected, risk assessment conducted, and compliance decision made must be securely stored and accessible for exactly 7 years. Relying on physical folders or basic digital drives creates significant privacy and compliance risks.

High-Risk Scenarios & Red Flags

High-value properties are frequently purchased through Discretionary Trusts and Companies to maximize privacy. For real estate agents, verifying the entity name on the contract is no longer sufficient; you must identify the humans behind it.

Common Indicators of Suspicious Activity in Real Estate

The "Unseen" Buyer
A buyer who purchases high-value property unseen, asks no questions about the property's condition, or is willing to pay significantly above market value without negotiation.

Complex Entity Structures
Property purchased by a shell company, offshore trust, or an entity where the Ultimate Beneficial Owners (UBOs - those owning 25% or more) are deliberately obscured or difficult to identify.

Unusual Funding Sources
Deposits paid by unrelated third parties, funds arriving from high-risk offshore jurisdictions, or significant cash/cryptocurrency payments without a logical explanation.

Enhanced CDD (EDD)

If a transaction is deemed high-risk—such as dealing with foreign Politically Exposed Persons (PEPs) or complex offshore trusts—you must trigger Enhanced CDD. This requires gathering data on the buyer's Source of Wealth and Source of Funds before allowing them to exchange contracts.

The "Tipping Off" Offence

If your agents become suspicious and you submit an SMR to AUSTRAC, it is a criminal offence to inform the buyer or the vendor. Your agents must be trained on how to handle the transaction normally to avoid alerting the suspects.

LEAD AML

AML. DONE RIGHT.

Don't Let Compliance Kill the Deal.

Building an AML program from scratch diverts hours away from listing and selling property. Chasing clients for IDs manually creates friction and delays exchanges. Lead AML provides the complete, tailored solution designed for high-performing real estate agencies.
